

Improving Project Management Culture[©]

Individualized Training Methods

Improving Project Management Culture Training is tailored to your organizational culture. With proven team assessment instruments, we individualize the course to fit the needs of your project team.

Global Consulting

Our team practices what we teach. An expert team of private and public corporate consultants, we take immense pride in learning.

TRAINING OBJECTIVES

Designed to engage students with real examples of project scenarios and cultural challenges.

We deliver strategies for overcoming cultural issues within a project team such as: team frustration, misunderstandings, the silent treatment, resource misalignment, and motivation differences.

UNIQUE APPROACH

Evidence-based curriculum focused on understanding and becoming a more effective project leader.

Presented with a mix of research and real examples, the power of culture can propel a project team to be successful.

INSTRUCTORS

Dr. Ron Sheffield, P.M.P. is a certified Six Sigma Blackbelt and Project Management Professional. He is also a recognized expert on the influence language has on culture and identity.

Ron is a lecturer at Christopher Newport University and The George Washington University specializing in leadership and member of an international research team focused on global business culture.

Jody Wilcox is a seasoned Program Manager and Senior Project Manager highly skilled at creating a productive and calm project team. His clients have included Wells Fargo, The Federal Reserve System, NORAD, Honeywell, Capital One, and MCI.

Mr. Wilcox and his wife Angie believe deeply in community engagement and they often travel internationally helping others.